A Sad Revelation of the Tattler's Habits.
(Lowell Times.)
And speaking of choruses brings to mind a novel idea—that is, the Tattler—why doesn't some one make a collection of physical inscriptions? Epitaph collectors are about as plenty as the companion monomaniacs of coin and medals collectors. There are a few Tattlers in the world, and if you find one, time you sit in a strange way examining all the hymn and prayer books and Bibles with your teeth, and if you find one, something usually regarded as foreign to such books, you have noticed upon a different kind of a page from the many in which it has been the Tattler's privilege to sit.

Not a Phenomenon in Boston.
(New York Journal.)
"What do you expect to get out of your stocking on Christmas?" asked a Boston boy of a five-year-old Boston boy who is visiting relatives in this city.
"Sir, I have bought a stocking that if I were so callow as to take any stock in the mythical story of Santa Claus, I should have no stocking of sufficient capacity to accommodate any expectations," replied the infant phenomenon.

You Pay Your Money.
(Lowell Times, Thursday, one edition.)
A chief merit in making Christmas presents is in their bestowal on those who can give nothing in return. There is a single word in the history of Santa Claus which shows him to have done any swapping.
"Lowell Times, Thursday, another edition." "Give, and it shall be given unto you."

Not in Boston, This Christmas.
(Goodrich's Chicago Sun.)
Full many a child that moves along the street, wondering that there's a father lurking near, but he's not the father of the child, and he's not the child of the father.

WITH SUPPLEMENT.
A Happy New Year
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 6, 1885.

We hope that all old subscribers will renew, as THE GLOBE during 1886 will be a paper that they cannot very well afford to do without. And we would respectfully ask all who renew to send as many new subscribers as they can. Every present subscriber can easily send at least one new subscriber, and that way testify his approval of THE GLOBE, and give encouragement to efforts for greater and more attractive literary features.

We urge upon many kind agents the importance of showing sample copies of THE GLOBE. THE GLOBE speaks for itself, and when fairly examined always wins the approval of the one to whom it is given. Sample copies are free, and will be sent immediately upon the receipt of a postal telling the number required. We call particular notice to the watch and book advertisements, as it has been decided to give agents commission upon each of those premiums.

We receive many inquiries concerning the quality of the Globe sewing machines. They are made upon the Singer model, and are first class in every respect, and are sold cheap because their patents have expired and their monopoly is broken.

Will every one who reads this notice send for sample copies and form a club? Send five subscriptions besides your own, or send four, three, or two subscriptions, if you cannot send five. Kindly determine, if you can do better, that you will certainly send one new subscriber. There are many towns in which only one copy is taken. It is very desirable that a club be formed in such places, as a bundle of papers is more quickly and safely transmitted by mail. Address THE WEEKLY GLOBE, Boston, Mass.

CONGRESS AND COUNTRY.
Few satisfactions are more real than that of being able to place things in their right relations. The painful hesitancy that comes of mental confusion at once subsides. When, then, we speak of Congress and the country, we mean to say that, if they are not distinct, they are yet far from identical. It is not legislation from which the life of this country is derived. Congress is by no means the core of the nation. It may have been in the beginning, but the inevitable process of evolution has brought prominence to the surface and is gradually displacing mere formulation. The men who compose the congresses of our time are not, as a class, the men of clarified and defined ideas, of patient and thorough thinking, of practical business experience, of large intellectual force, or of varied and admirable culture. The great majority of those who to-day our legislative halls contribute nothing to the stores of legislative wisdom, and do little more than acquire the technique of the rules of law-making and learn to pronounce with interdictory the parliamentary orator.

The titular prefix to his name seems to be the mark of distinction most coveted by the modern member of Congress, the last thing about which men of genuine republican spirit ought to be solicitous. To the bulky volume, whose increasing pages entitle it to represent the nation, Congress is in reality not much more than the frontispiece. When an intelligent foreigner visits us, with a view to studying the people and their maturing institutions, he rarely begins with an excursion into our congressional domain. He hastens instead to look through our flourishing and busy manufacturing towns, lingers in our great trade and money centers, takes a close view of our expanded agricultural industry, and makes personal acquaintance with our methods of education. The legislative study comes last, and generally leaves the most fleeting impression. It is not Congress that is the parent of our free institutions. That body does not even shape or control them. On the contrary, it is they whose agent and creature Congress really is, and it derives its actual importance by catching their informing spirit and reflecting their vital purposes.

Civil and social institutions alike spring from an entire people and their environments, not from a small body of changing agents and servants. We have congresses in this country other than the one to which the work of legislation has been entrusted. They are the annual congresses of our merchants and business men, of our bankers and insurance men, of our railroad men, our mechanics and workmen, our agriculturists, our students and scientists, our commercial travelers and the rest. From these come the motives to legislation, and these are the disinterested resolutions are supplied most of the reasons for congressional action, far in advance of which runs the current of popular thinking. If in older countries where form is more than life, the imperial will and the mailed hand compel legislation from without, in this country it is compelled from within by the expanding forces that are resident only in the people. And that is why we look for our current statesmanship outside of Congress rather than at its benches.

For only as it may profit from party struggles and contentions does it apparently consent to take the popular wishes in the form of statute law. And here we are furnished an explanation of the modern world's way our public men so often come short of being great men. It is because they fail to rise to the occasion which no mere party either lures or compels. While organized political parties are acknowledged necessities in the energetic administration of free government, they are to be regarded as but the means by which public policies and purposes may be successfully achieved. To make them their varying fortunes the unwavering yet actual object of all public discussion is not much more than playing at government when the attention should be seriously engaged. It may be that the principle expressed in minority representation will some day supersede partisan contention as we now have it, and then statesmanship will be likely to rule in Congress because legislation will be lifted to a higher level.

MR. BAYARD AND THE FISHERMEN.
We are glad that Secretary BAYARD has come to Massachusetts on a visit. It will give him an opportunity to gain valuable information on a subject of vast importance to a great industry—that of fisheries. When, last spring, the secretary made an agreement with British Minister West that, in consideration of a temporary extension of the operation of the fishery clauses in the treaty of Washington, the United States government would recommend the appointment of a new commissioner, he did so with a view to our fishermen. He could hardly have made an arrangement more detrimental to American or more advantageous to British interests than the one involved in that agreement. Still, it is not too late to modify the evils thus brought on. How to accomplish that object may well be ascertained by moving among the recognized leaders in the fishing business. They are all right here within convenient reach.

The secretary must already know the magnitude of the interests engaged. Our American fisheries, taken as a whole, represent a capital invested of $7,955,349, with an annual value of products amounting to $43,046,053. More than 130,000 persons are employed in the business, and upwards of 500,000 persons, including men, women and children, are dependent upon it for support. We are quoting from the last census. New England alone furnishes $19,697,007 of the total capital invested, or somewhat more than one-third of the total. The New Englanders are dependent upon the fisheries for their living, 37,043 New Englanders being actually engaged in the work. About one in every 100 of the entire population in the United States is supported by this industry.

Since the treaty of 1818 the fishing interests of the United States have suffered for the benefit of Great Britain's American colonies. By the unfortunate provisions then made, and the British constructions thereon, the United States has been deprived of time to time upon them. Americans have lost much. In that treaty the United States renounced the right to fish "within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bays and harbors of his Britannic Majesty's dominions in North America." As Great Britain's colonies took it upon themselves to judge of the distance, the fishermen from the United States were gradually crowded away out beyond all reason. Frequent disputes were the consequence.

In 1854 "the government of the United States being equally desirous with Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain to avoid further misunderstanding between their respective subjects in regard to the extent of the right of fishing on the coasts of North America," the so-called reciprocity treaty was entered into, whereby the American fishermen were permitted to take fish upon the British American coasts without restrictions as to distance from shore, in return for which the United States government stipulated that an extensive list of British-American products should enter the United States duty free. Fish of all kinds were placed on this list. The preponderance of advantage was, as usual, on the British side. Then came the treaty of 1871, known as the treaty of Washington. This was by far the worst of all. We not only permitted the Canadians to bring their fish into our markets duty free, but agreed to an indemnity clause under which Great Britain was awarded $5,000,000 in payment for her sharelessness in getting the United States government to ruin the business of its own fishermen. That treaty has been terminated. Great Britain wants another, of course, and the administration has been led into making a recommendation for a new commission.

The American fishermen have had about enough of this sort of business. Almost every interest but theirs is protected, while they get not only no protection, but are practically discriminated against, under a treaty which permits Canadian fishermen to sell their fish here duty free. They insist that there shall be nothing more of the kind. They do not object so much to the restrictions put on by the British government, but protest against being compelled to struggle against both the British government and their own.

It is time for our American diplomats to rid themselves of the notion that the man governing here in this life is an approving smile from the wearer of British titles. International politeness is a good thing, but when it comes to cringing and fawning to representatives of foreign powers, to the ruin of our own interests, it loses its character of civility and becomes assiduity.

THAT FAMILIAR LETTER ONCE MORE.
WILLIAM M. PRICE, one of the men charged with the forgery of the famous MOREY letter, has just been admitted to practice the Alpheus County bar, Pennsylvania. In admitting him to the bar Judge EVING stated that the charges had been carefully investigated by the examining committee of the bar and had been shown to be utterly without foundation, and that the court had also been satisfied to the fullest extent that the gentleman had been slandered.

As this circumstance again brings into prominence the much-disputed letter, and disposes of one more prop on which the friends of Mr. GARFIELD relied to show that he was a forger, it is not inappropriate to give the substance of a brief conversation which occurred a few months ago.

During the campaign of 1884, the noted Republican wire-puller and manager, JOHN I. DAVENPORT, published what purported to be conclusive evidence that the MOREY letter was a forgery. Mr. PRICE, who has just been so handsomely exonerated by the Alpheus County Court, figured in Mr. DAVENPORT'S publication in the role of "first heavy villain," and a large part of the superstructure of Mr. DAVENPORT'S "proofs" rested on that basis. Shortly after their pamphlet had appeared, one of the most noted public men in America, residing not a million miles from Massachusetts, was discussing the contents of the document with a caller when the public man remarked:

"My friend DAVENPORT has made out a good case."

"Yes, it is plausible."

"But do you know what I think about that MOREY letter?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Well, I know GARFIELD long and well, and I think GARFIELD wrote it."

BETTER NOT TRY IT.
The Tory party of England professes to make the maintenance of the empire as the guiding star of its policy. If it sincerely in this profession, and had sagacity, it would make any and all possible concessions to satisfy and pacify the Irish people, for the British Empire can never be really strong against external enemies so long as it has the great mass of Irishmen for its internal foes. If all the Irish people were to hold the tall talk of the London Times about settling the "home rule" agitation by martial law, might be a feasible and practicable, though it would none the less be a wicked suggestion. But they are not. In Australia, in Canada, in India, in every British colony and dependency, and all over Great Britain itself Irishmen are a large part of the people. To proclaim martial law in Ireland is to proclaim a civil war of world-wide dimensions. If the Tories really want to maintain "the integrity of the empire," they had better find the way to do so. But with Ireland self-governing, prosperous, and contented the "integrity of the empire" would have a very fair prospect.

EDITORIAL POINTS.
Out of about 50,000 fourth-class postmaster-tips in the country the Democrats hold but 7000. Had the conditions been reversed—had a Republican administration succeeded a Democratic one—there would have been a large number of Democrats in the office to tell the tale. Nor would that have been the end of it. Republican postmaster-tips would have gone around months ago in sackcloth and ashes, asking forgiveness for not having been able to smite the wicked Democrats even more expeditiously.

As a condenser of news, ROBERT CONKLING equals the New York Sun. The barber had a touch of delirium tremens, probably, or else was crazy or had a mania. He had been drinking too long, and his master's ears had grown much too large, so that they must be trimmed—and he made a slash at one with his sharp scissors, nearly severing a strip. It is the graphic language he used to tell a column story in half a dozen lines.

The fact that BLAINE'S name was not received with uproarious applause when mentioned at the Merchants' dinner, the other night, affords the esteemed Herald an opportunity to again pitch into the Plumed Knight. We had supposed that the campaign ended somewhat more than a year ago. But there it is, one of the chief prerogatives of the truly independent press to jump on a man when he is down.

New York Sun: So long as no dishonest and no incapable officers get appointed, how can there be any more demoralization in appointing Democrats, without whom the election could not have been carried, than in appointing Republicans who voted for BLAINE, because they bear the certificates of Mr. DORMAN B. EATON that they have got such and such marks in an examination in grammar and geography?

Harper's Ferry bids to become famous for something besides the beauty of its scenery and the raid of the Osage warriors. A manufacturing party, whose president says the "syndicate has plenty of capital and is there to stay," proposes to no enliven the place as to attract a population of 50,000. All the same, John Brown's soul will still go marching on.

Two Republicans have been dismissed from the departments of War and Navy, and Democrats appointed in their place. At least this leaves a few members of the Congress of thought and intellect, and a few ready in from their romping when supper is ready has a large control on his hands.

Mrs. Mary Moreau has held the post of State Librarian for Mississippi since 1868, and has been in the office for years, being the only woman ever elected to office in that State, either by Legislature or people. During her term of office the library has steadily improved in every way. It is now among the best in the country and certainly unsurpassed for usefulness in the South. Only the workers in public libraries can appreciate fully how much of that handiness and comfort which seem inherent in the work of the librarian, the management and arrangement of the library at Jackson, which the State of Mississippi is fortunate in her librarian, who may well be an example to her fellow office-holders.

Senator HOAR says Massachusetts has most wisely substituted the educational qualifications for the property qualifications for voters. All the same, the qualifications most rigidly insisted upon is essentially a property qualification. Manhood, patriotism, loyalty, education, count for nothing unless accompanied by a money payment for the right to vote.

Mr. ALFRED E. BURR, the veteran Connecticut journalist, has just celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his editorship of the Hartford "Times." He has written the "Hartford good fight" and "kept the faith" of Democracy steadfastly all these many years. We hope it will be a very long one, for he has been writing it for twenty years, and he is now getting on in years.

New York: Mr. EDISON claims that he is now devoting his inventive intellect to the perfection of a photograph in which the sound of the human voice can be inscribed on the film in the same way as the image of the human face is inscribed in making themselves heard in all parts of the house.

They take murderers and roast them alive in Alabama. In Massachusetts, as a rule, we either acquit them as insane or imprison them for life, and let them rot in the State Prison. The Massachusetts is a scandal to civilization. The Massachusetts way is an encouragement to barbarism.

Both Russia and Austria are standing with chips on their shoulders. The hostilities between Serbia and Bulgaria furnish the outward and visible cause for this maniacal and unprovoked aggression. Sic him, Austria! Sic him, Russia!

The St. Paul Globe says "the silver question is practically settled in advance of any agitation of it in Congress." As an oracular utterance this is almost equal to the speech of Hon. WILLIAM MAXWELL EVARTS.

Mr. HOAR'S presidential succession bill, if it passed, would expose the country to the greatest risk that has ever threatened it. It would place the country in the hands of THOMAS F. BAYARD and the presidency. That is trusting considerable to chance.

DORMAN B. EATON thinks he could now pass a perfect examination on the meaning of that famous line on the ingratitude of Republicans.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1886.

NO. 1.

Grand Annual Announcement

Ladies of New England.

Every item enumerated in this advertisement means economy to the prudent purchaser.

Please mention The Weekly Globe when sending your order.

THIS ANNOUNCEMENT

will reach thousands of people within the next few days, and if we may judge from past experience the rush of customers and the flow of orders which will follow will be astounding. We therefore say without any comment whatever that all purchases should be made and all orders forwarded at the earliest possible moment, thereby avoiding the disappointments caused by the broken assortments which will be inevitable long before the close of the month.

ORDERS BY MAIL

will receive prompt attention by our staff of carefully trained order clerks. Satisfaction will be insured and travelling expenses saved. Goods sent C. O. D. with privilege to return if not satisfactory. Cash remittances can be safely forwarded by registered letter, post office or express money order or by drafts on Boston banks.

The following lots enumerated are merely specimens of the great values to be offered by us. Last January our sales were something prodigious, yet the values offered (which we at that time considered unapproachable) are in nearly every instance eclipsed by the marvellous bargains we shall offer during this our great sale of 1886. We refer our many patrons who have been waiting for this announcement to a careful perusal of the following list of inimitable values, inviting close inspection before purchasing.

BLACK SILKS.

The lowest prices and best values ever offered to the public.

Black Gros Grain Silks, 55c, 65c, 75c, 87c, $1.00, in fine heavy quality; just the thing for early Spring costumes.

Black Gros Grain Silks, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.50, the best values we have ever offered.

A full line of the celebrated manufacturers C. J. Bonnet and Bellon & Co. of Lyons black silks, which we shall offer at lower prices than ever before.

Black Satin Rhadamens, the most fashionable of all for the coming season, at 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 and $2.00. They will be found exceptional bargains.

Black Surah Silks, 24 inches wide, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00, very popular for spring and summer wear.

COLORED SILKS.

Colored Gros Grain Silks at $1.00, in all the latest shades, from the best manufacturers in America, and undoubtedly the greatest value ever offered in colored silks.

Colored Satin Rhadamens, in a beautiful assortment of shades and exceptional values, at $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

Colored Faille Francaise, in all the new shades, special values at $1.50 per yard. In this department we have marked down all our remnants and short lengths, both in street and evening effects, to less than half price, in order to close them out immediately.

BROCADE VELVETS.

Black Brocade Velvets at $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50.

Colored Brocade Velvets at $1.50 and $2.00.

Two toned Brocade Velvets, elegant quality, $2.00 to $2.50 per yard.

Woolen custom, marked down in this department all the short lengths and cut pieces to less than the actual cost of importation, in order to close them out before our semi-annual inventory.

SILK PLUSHES AND VELVETS.

Colored Silk Velvets in a most complete assortment of shades; special values at $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

Colored Silk Plush, in splendid assortment of shades, suitable for trimming skirts, garments or fancy work; extraordinary values at $1.50 per yard.

Special bargains in Black and Colored All-Silk Lyons Velvets, in many instances marked at less than half the actual cost of importation.

OUR REGULAR ANNUAL SALE

LINEN HOUSEKEEPING GOODS

Will commence with an array of unapproachable values.

This event is now so universally looked for that we do not think it necessary to dwell at length on the fact of its announcement. Thrifty housekeepers and hotel proprietors recognize this as the leading opportunity in the year to purchase all the linen goods they will want for the next twelve months, and, bearing this in mind, we have made prices that will create a general furor.

Items marked thus * are special bargains, and must be sought for at once by persons wishing to obtain them.

Grand Annual ANNOUNCEMENT

TO THE Ladies of New England.

Please mention The Weekly Globe when sending your order.

HAMBURG EDGINGS AND INSERTIONS.

Our entire stock to be offered during this season of the year was manufactured expressly for us in the manufacturing centre of Switzerland during the dull season last summer, when labor was at its very lowest. It is the largest and best selected stock we have ever had, and what is more it is offered at lower prices than have ever been made by us or any other house on this continent on similar goods.
The stock comprises the most exquisite designs in Cambric Edgings and Insertions, Cambric Sets and All-overs to match, Nainsook Edging Sets and Flouncings, Swiss Muslin Sets in the latest novelties and Flouncings (our special designs and combinations), in Colored Edgings and Sets, etc., etc., comprising the most perfect collection ever brought to this country, which we offer at prices ranging from 3c. to $5.00 per yard.

A SPECIALTY WITH US. ODD STRIPS.

During the past summer we have visited every manufacturing district of importance in Switzerland and have bought up every odd strip of Cambric, Nainsook and Swiss Muslin Edgings, in all widths, of medium and high grades.
They are the odd strips (4 1/2 yards in length) which are left over after billing every yard of fabric in Europe or this country. We purchased by us at fifty per cent. discount from regular prices, and are now offered over our retail counters as a special benefit to our customers, at a slight advance on their cost to us, prices ranging from 3c. to $1.00 per yard.

LACES AND LACE ARTICLES.

We shall offer our entire stock of Laces at prices which will ensure their immediate disposal. The stock is taken from the most important stock before stock-taking, February 1. Below are enumerated a few of the many great values offered:
